

DID YOU KNOW?

If you let your plants go to seed and leave them alone all winter, they will drop their seeds or fruit right where they are, and replant themselves next spring. Then you can pull everything out in the spring, churn your soil, and see what starts popping up in your garden.

DID YOU KNOW?

If you let your plants go to seed and leave them alone all winter, they will drop their seeds or fruit right where they are, and replant themselves next spring. Then you can pull everything out in the spring, churn your soil, and see what starts popping up in your garden.

DID YOU KNOW?

If you let your plants go to seed and leave them alone all winter, they will drop their seeds or fruit right where they are, and replant themselves next spring.

DID YOU KNOW?

If you let your plants go to seed and leave them alone all winter, they will drop their seeds or fruit right where they are, and replant themselves next spring. Then you can pull everything out in the spring, churn your soil, and see what starts popping up in your garden.